The Problem

Young people (13-24) are faced with the daunting task of making informed decisions about their education journey, career opportunities and long-term employment prospects.

Technology has brought about unprecedented and accelerated rates of change to the jobs landscape and an increasing risk of mass unemployment.

Optimum education, training and development choices are vital to equip today's youth for a future of uncertainty.

The Challenge

It is in the interest of parents, educators, governments and entire economies to promote appropriate capabilities and elevate the proficiency of their national workforce.

The computational tools are currently not available to young people to motivate and facilitate truly informed decision-making and learning planning.

Selfsuite™ proposes to enable this urgently needed capability and transform life prospects one person at a time.

The Solution

A completely private and secure intelligence network, designed explicitly for the personal benefit of the individual user.

Leverage the same spectrum of data-streams, processing and interpretation capabilities, that are widely exploited by governments, financial markets, research analysts and commerce.

Open-up these resources to the individual, in a user-friendly gameplay oriented platform, that is powerful and fun to use over the course of a student's formative years.

This is not a social networking platform
